Case No. 2:05CV404 DAK

This matter is before the court on David Allen’s (“Petitioner”) pro se Motion to Vacate, Set Aside, or Correct Sentence Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. On February 28, 2002, Petitioner pleaded guilty to Bank Robbery, Aiding & Abetting. On May 7, 2002, the court sentenced Petitioner to 151 months in prison and 36 months of supervised release. Petitioner’s sentence was enhanced due to his career criminal status. Petitioner challenges the enhancement as unconstitutional under United States v. Booker, ___ U.S. ___, 125 S. Ct. 738, 756 (2005) and Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 124 S. Ct. 2531 (2004).

DISCUSSION

Petitioner’s motion fails for a variety of reasons. First, in pleading guilty to the indictment, Petitioner waived his right to collaterally challenge his sentence. See Statement in Advance of Plea, dated February 28, 2002. In addition, United States v. Booker, ___ U.S. ___, 125 S. Ct. 738, 756 (2005) does not apply retroactively to cases on collateral review. A party filing a § 2255 motion must do so within one year of:

- (1) the date on which the judgment of conviction becomes final;
- (2) the date on which the impediment to making a motion created by governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, if the movant was prevented from making a motion by such governmental action;
- (3) the date on which the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if that right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review; or
- (4) the date on which the facts supporting the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

28 U.S.C.A. § 2255. Petitioner's motion was filed almost three years after his judgment of conviction became final. Petitioner, however, has filed this motion within one year of the date on which Booker was decided, implicitly arguing that Booker is a "newly recognized" right that should be applied retroactively to cases on collateral review.

There are two lines of cases disposing of § 2255 motions based solely upon Booker: (A) cases finding that Booker does not apply retroactively because it is a new procedural rule that does not implicate the fundamental fairness of the criminal proceeding; and (B) cases finding that Booker does not apply retroactively because the Supreme Court has not specifically held that it does, as required under Tyler v. Cain, 533 U.S. 656 (2001). Petitioner's motion is denied under both approaches.

A. Booker Does Not Apply Retroactively Because It Is a New Procedural Rule That Does Not Implicate Fundamental Fairness

When the Supreme Court announces a "new rule," the rule "applies to all criminal cases still pending on direct review." Schriro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348, 124 S. Ct. 2519, 1522

(2004). As to already final cases, the new rule applies only in limited circumstances. Id. “New substantive rules generally apply retroactively. . . . New rules of procedure, on the other hand, generally do not apply retroactively” unless the procedural rule is a “‘watershed rule[] of criminal procedure’ implicating the fundamental fairness and accuracy of the criminal proceeding.” Id. at 2522-23 (internal quotations omitted). “A rule is substantive rather than procedural if it alters the range of conduct or the class of persons that the law punishes. In contrast, rules that regulate only the manner of determining the defendant’s culpability are procedural.” Id. at 2523 (internal citations omitted) (emphasis in original).

The Court in Booker “did not alter the range of conduct or the class of persons that the law punishes.” United States v. Price, 400 F.3d 844, 845 (10th Cir. 2005).<sup>1</sup> Instead, Booker merely “altered the range of permissible methods for determining the appropriate length of punishment.” Id. (quotations omitted). “Rules that allocate decisionmaking authority in this fashion are prototypical procedural rules.” Schriro, 124 S. Ct. at 2523. Thus, Booker announces a procedural rule. See Price, 400 F.3d at 845; Rucker v. United States, 2005 WL 331336, *5 (D. Utah Feb. 10, 2005) (holding that Booker is a procedural rule); McReynolds v. United States, 397 F.3d 479, 481 (7th Cir. 2005) (same); United States v. Siegelbaum, 2005 WL 196526, *2 (D. Or. Jan. 26, 2005) (same).

To determine whether a procedural rule applies retroactively, the court must determine (1) if the procedural rule is a new rule, and (2) if the new procedural rule falls into two limited

<sup>1</sup> In United States v. Price, 400 F.3d 844 (10th Cir. 2005), the court addressed the applicability of Booker by analyzing whether Blakely was a procedural or substantive rule. Id. at 845. However, Price does not conclude that Blakely applied to the Federal Sentencing Guidelines prior to Booker. Instead, the court states, “even if the Court did apply Blakely to the federal guidelines, Blakely would not apply retroactively to initial § 2255 motions for collateral relief.” Id.; United States v. Leonard, 2005 WL 139183 (10th Cir. Jan. 24, 2005) .

exceptions to the general rule that procedural rules do not apply retroactively. Price, 400 F.3d at 845.

1. Booker Is a New Rule

To determine whether Booker was a new rule at the time that Petitioner's conviction became final, the court must first determine the date Petitioner's conviction became final, and second, whether Booker announces a new rule. Id. at 845. First, "a conviction becomes final when the availability of a direct appeal has been exhausted, and the time for filing a certiorari petition with the Supreme Court has elapsed, or the Court has denied a timely certiorari petition." Id. at 845. By pleading guilty, Petitioner waived his right to directly appeal his sentence and challenges his sentence only on collateral review under 28 U.S.C.A. § 2255. Therefore, Petitioner's sentence became final on the date his sentence was entered, October 24, 2003, well before Booker was decided by the Supreme Court.

Second, "[a] rule is new when it 'breaks new ground or imposes a new obligation on the States or the Federal government' or if it 'was not dictated by precedent existing at the time the defendant's conviction became final.'" Johnson v. McKune, 288 F.3d 1187, 1196 (10th Cir. 2002) (quoting Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 301 (1989)); Rucker, 2005 WL 331336, *5. Although prior case law may have foreshadowed Booker, it did not compel the decision. See Price, 400 F.3d at 848. Therefore, Booker is a new rule. See id.; Rucker, 2005 WL 331336, *5 (holding Booker is a new rule); McReynolds, 397 F.3d at 481 (same); Siegelbaum, 2005 WL 196526, *2 (same).

2. As a New Procedural Rule, Booker Does Not Apply Retroactively Because It Does Not Fit Within the Limited Exceptions Under Teague

New procedural rules generally do not apply retroactively, unless they fall within two limited exceptions under Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 307 (1989). See Price, 400 F.3d at 848. First, a new procedural rule will apply retroactively if it “‘places certain kinds of primary, private individual conduct beyond the power of the criminal law-making authority to proscribe.’” Id. (quoting Teague, 489 U.S. at 307). Booker does not fall within this exception. Id. Second, a new procedural rule will apply retroactively if it is a “‘watershed rule[] of criminal procedure implicating the fundamental fairness and accuracy of the criminal proceeding.’” Id. (quoting O’Dell v. Netherland, 521 U.S. 151, 156 (1997)).

In Booker, the Court found the Sentencing Guidelines unconstitutional because they allowed a judge to impose a sentence based on facts neither admitted to nor proven by a jury. 125 S. Ct. at 756. The Court determined in Schariro, that judicial factfinding does not implicate fundamental fairness because the evidence is “‘simply too equivocal” to support the conclusion that judicial factfinding “‘so seriously diminishe[s]’ accuracy that there is an ‘impermissibly large risk’ of punishing conduct the law does not reach.” Schariro, 124 S. Ct. at 2525 (quoting Teague, 489 U.S. at 312-13 (internal quotation marks omitted)). Thus, the judicial factfinding proscribed by Booker does not implicate fundamental fairness. See Price, 400 F.3d at 848. Therefore, Booker does not apply retroactively because it is a new procedural rule that does not implicate the fundamental fairness and accuracy of the criminal proceeding. Because Petitioner’s conviction became final prior to the Booker decision, Booker does not apply to Petitioner’s case.

B. Booker Does Not Apply Retroactively Because the Supreme Court Has Not Specifically Held That It Does, As Required Under *Tyler v. Cain

While the above analysis would dispose of this case, Petitioner’s motion is denied on the independent ground that the Supreme Court has not specifically held that Booker applies retroactively to cases on collateral review, as required under 28 U.S.C.A. § 2255(3). Under § 2255, a Petitioner seeking review of his/her sentence based on a “newly recognized” right may do so only if the right was recognized by the Supreme Court and if the Court made the “newly recognized” right “retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review.” Id. § 2255(3). Therefore, Booker applies to § 2255 motions only if (1) it is a “newly recognized” right, and (2) if the Supreme Court made it “retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review.” Id. First, as discussed above, Booker announces a new rule.

Second, under § 2255, the new rule must have been made “retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review.” 28 U.S.C.A. § 2255(3). The Court in Tyler v. Cain interpreted similar language found in 28 U.S.C. § 2244 in determining the retroactive application of Cage v. Louisiana, 498 U.S. 39 (1990). See Tyler, 533 U.S. 656, 658 (2001). Section 2244 limits courts from awarding relief to prisoners who file successive habeas corpus applications, unless the prisoner “rel[ies] on a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously unavailable.” See id. at 661-62. The Court found that under § 2244, for a new constitutional rule to apply retroactively to cases on collateral review, the Supreme Court—and the Supreme Court alone—must hold that the rule applies retroactively to cases on collateral review. See id. at 662-63. Therefore, the Court found that Cage did not apply to successive § 2244 applications because the Court had not specifically held that it applied. See id.

The language of § 2255 is similar to § 2244. Section 2255 limits review based on a new constitutional right to those rights “recognized by the Supreme Court and made applicable to cases on collateral review.” 28 U.S.C.A. § 2255(3). The Booker Court specifically held that its determination applied “to all cases on direct review.” 125 S. Ct. at 769. The Court did not, however, hold that it applied retroactively to cases on collateral review, as required by Tyler to find retroactive application. Thus, Booker does not apply retroactively to cases on collateral review. See In re Anderson, 396 F.3d 1336, 1339-40 (11th Cir. 2005) (holding that under Tyler, neither Booker nor Blakely retroactively applies to § 2255 motions); see also Godines v. Joslin, 2005 WL 177959, *2 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 27, 2005) (refusing to extend Booker to § 2255 motions); Gerrish v. United States, 2005 WL 159642, *1 (D. Me. Jan. 25, 2005) (holding that neither Blakely nor Booker applies retroactively to § 2255 motions).

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Petitioner’s Motion to Vacate, Set Aside, or Correct Sentence Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 is DENIED.

DATED this 11th day of October, 2005.
